THE SENATE.

Washington, February 12.—Mr. Morgan, on behalf of the committee to consider the state of the law in relation to the election of president and vice president, stated that though anxious to bring forward some proposition in reference to this very important subject, the committee thought it would be in vain to do so at this late stage of the session, and would therefore abandon the pending measures before them.

Mr. Hereford presented the joint resolutions of West Virginia, relative to the cession to that state of the vacant lands and water power at Harper's Ferry. He also introduced a bill on the subject, the committee on education.

Mr. desive says that he is not yet through with his improvements, and that next summer he will continue them, the first one being the seating of the dress circle with velvet folding chairs of the most elegant and comfortable pattern. He says that, as experience has demonstrated that two theaters cannot prosper in a city of the size of at lants, it is to his interest to fix his opera house so nicely that no sensible man could think of creeting another one in opposition to his. This reasoning is certainly very sensible. We congratulate Mr. desive on his perspicacity and his energy, and we hope that by the present prosperous times he will be rewarded for his entirprise better than he has been in the past years.

The reporter asked what feature of their work impressed him most, and he answered with enthusiastic emphasis, "The practical ways of their working impressed me more. They are managed on strictly business principles. Whenever a dollar was spent it was made to Yesterday a Constitution reporter, who is acquainted with a few facts not generally known, determined to give the vendors of lottery tickets, who ply their avocation in Atlanta, an airing so that the public could get a glimpse of the violation of the state laws which goes on daily under the very nasal organs of the people. The first place visited was a little shoe shop on Ivy street, in the rear of the Southern hotel. The room was full of nego men and women with one or two worthless white men. They were discussing their losses and gains, but quickly husbed as the pencil driver entered. The magic sheet on which the numbers are recorded was rolled up, and to the uninitiated, gave no sign of its use. The reporter was about to conclude that he had come too late to get his item, and asked why the sheet had been rolled up.

"Oh "said the proprieter of the place, as "Oh "said the proprieter of the public to place the proprieter of the public to place the proprieter of the public to place

The apparent fa-miliarty of the reporter with the place seemed to re assure the crowd, and an known in the city, started the conversation m going west weere the big wheel turns. Athens, Captain Connoily yesterday arrested J. R. Maynard, a Lula merchant, who was in town, and who it is alleged to the complainant a forged note upon Mr. P. P. Perkle. It appears that about three weeks ago Maynard went thin Mr. Fleming's store, at Athens, and borrowed forty dollars from him, giving as security a note upon Mr. P. P. Perkle. for five hundred dollars. After making the trade, Maynard told Mr. Fleming that the note would be redeemed by his brother in a few days. Subsequently, however, he again visited Mr. Fleming and procured twenty-one dollars more upon the note. way house would be, and pointed out its advantages to the Du'ch East India company. One of their arguments was that it was expedient to prevent the cape being occupied by the Portuguese. Curiously, the Portuguese, who discovered and named the Cape of Good Hope, never tried to occupy it. They occasionally had landed there, and the viceroy of Goa and seventy-five men had been killed by the natives. Their comrades took a cruel and treacherous revenge. They sent ashor as brass cannon as a present to the native chief. It was loaded with grape-shot, and ropes to drag it were attached to the muzzle. The Hottentots crowded to the ropes to carry off their prize. The Portuguese fired it. The slaughter was terrible; the frightneed survivors fled, and the Portuguese got back to their ship as fast as they could. They nevertired to land again.
